Big Country, Vol. 2: Stories of Louis L'Amour (West of the Tularosa, Home in the Valley, and West Is Where the Heart Is) Louis L'Amour

Louis L'Amour said that the West was no place for the frightened or the mean. It was a big country needing big men and women to live in it. Here are three fine short stories about the West written by L'Amour, the most decorated author in the history of American letters.

West of the Tularosa Ward McQueen, foreman for the Tumbling K, is accused of killing a nearby rancher and he is going to need some help to prove his innocence.

Home in the Valley If Steve Mehan can make it to Seattle from Sacramento on horseback and beat the steamer carrying some bad news, he can still recoup the money to save five ranches back home.

West Is Where the Heart Is Home is still more than two hundred miles away when Jim London comes across the burned-out wagon train with only one survivor, a five year-old girl. He'll have to take her with him.
